That's very true. The Falcons have been very good at times on offense, defense and special teams. But they haven't truly had a game where all three units clicked.

It was a huge play that could have huge implications on the season. But the goal-line stand masked a lot of other flaws. Atlanta's secondary gave up touchdown passes from second-year quarterback Josh Freeman to rookie receivers Mike Williams and Arrelious Benn, and the special teams were dismal for much of the day.
